IN WASHINGTON, the State department said it had no right to deny an American passport to Dr. Maurice Halperin, shown in 1953 at time he was fired as a Boston university professor for refusing to say if he had ever been a member of the Communist party, and before he and his wife planned secretly to Russia via Mexico in 1953 to work for Soviet, probably on Latin American affairs.

IN MOSCOW, the Communist youth organ Komsomolskaya Pravda said Richard Renaud Lane, shown at home in Monterey Park, Calif., was an agent of American intelligence during the International Youth festival in Moscow in 1957, and that he recruited two Soviet young men for espionage. Billy, said Lane, in effect

SPY STUFF

IN CHICAGO, Robert Berlin, shown at his home, told a reporter that in 1958, when he was going on a two-month tour of Russia and said, he was approached by a Central Intelligence agency man who asked him to spy for the U.S. He said he told the agent he didn't think it proper for a tourist to spy.
